To celebrate his ninth season in the East End, gallerist Todd Merrill is showcasing a wide assortment of art and artisan goods made from natural materials. The works on display are by various talents who explore issues of sustainability in their craft while still pushing the boundaries of their medium to intoxicating new directions. Here, visitors can take in the textural fiber collages of Savannah, Georgia, artist Erik Speer, abstract quilted compositions by Gerri Spilka, Annie Legault's oversize hanging crochet sculptures, as well as works by Vadim Kibardin, Connor Moxam and Joseph Cleghorn, Christopher Russell, and Maarten Vrolijk that utilize ceramics, repurposed cardboard, resin, paper, lacquer, and more.
